ABELINO CORTINA'S MIRRORED CONFESSIONAL

The Mirrored Confessional delves into the psychological layers of identity, denial, and the journey towards self-acceptance, all through the lens of a Catholic upbringing. Step inside this confessional booth, where the mirrored interior and shifting lights create an intimate space for reflection. As you listen to the looped audio, you're enveloped in narratives of struggle, denial, and ultimately, healing—each story a testament to the profound process of embracing one's true self.

For me, this project is deeply personal. Growing up gay in a Catholic family, I grappled with my identity in the shadow of religious teachings. The Mirrored Confessional is my attempt to offer others a space I yearned for during my own journey—a place for introspection and healing, where the echoes of shared experiences resonate profoundly.

This zine is more than just a collection of pages; it's a tangible manifestation of the inner turmoil many of us face. Within its vibrant pages, I explore the complex relationship between closeted Catholic gays and the ornate trappings of religion. Drawing inspiration from my own struggles, I aim to capture the essence of Catholic-inspired design, creating a sanctuary where every detail tells a story of resilience and self-discovery. Amidst the beauty lies a quiet sadness, a gentle reminder of the pain and longing that accompanies the search for acceptance in a world that often feels unforgiving.
